REVIEW OF 12 THE INDUS VALLEY CIVILIZATION NEW MAN PUBLICATION

- i cant explain how amazing and touching and inspiring this book is nothing else to say, if u have BPD buy this book immediately. it has helped me so much and i know it will help u, i promise.
- It's been awhile since I read "Lady in Waiting," so I'm going largely from memory here refreshed by other reviewers' comments. Nevertheless, I remember feeling unnecessarily guilt-tripped by this book, especially by the opening salvo of contrasting the heartbroken, lonely single woman with the content "lady in waiting," as if anyone who's ever had a crying jag after yet another friend's wedding is somehow spiritually inferior. I'm exaggerating, but not much. The authors do a noble job of trying to steer women away from desperate, anxious, "where is he?" behavior, but in doing so they put way too much emphasis on the believer herself and not enough on the Cross. How can I say that about a book that proposes to help you love God more than the idea of being married? Yes, our ultimate fulfillment is in Christ and he should always be our first priority, married or unmarried, but that's a goal we never fully reach this side of heaven. It ultimately produces pride in the married person and guilt in the single person to suggest that ONLY after you've satisfied yourself fully with Christ will God see fit to bring you a mate. Sorry ... that's not Biblical nor is it possible. Better advice is to continually look to the Cross for mercy in all our shortcomings while having confidence in a gracious God who supplies all our needs despite our sinfulness.
