REVIEW OF THE INVENTION OF HUGO CABRET NOVEL STUDIES

- NICE COLORFUL & IMAGINATION-FULL ENJOYABLE EASY TO READ BOOK!(HATS-OFF!)THE PICTURES REALLY R VERY PRETTY & WE LIKE TO LOOK AT THE DIFFERENT SHAPES OF HATS ON THE ANIMALS! (MAKES THE BOYS LAUGH)

• Brilliant Idea: Write Adele Varen's tale. A+Horrible execution and a Cat One loss of aircraft and crew, just past the fence. F Is For Failed. The start of the narrative, from Adele's childhood in Paris is well done; the exploration of Adele's, Celine's and Rochester's characters is just the sort of story I had been hoping for. Adele being an artistically gifted (and lonely) child, without being formally educated is well done, and her "French Defects" are largely the result of an early childhood spent as a kid of a showbiz legend, spoiled (then spurned) by Celine and her lovers- and sometimes, "customers". However, Ms. T hadn't followed the chronology of Jane Eyre well, and the departure from controlled flight begins with Adele's arrival at Thornfield. CB's chronology of important events at Thornfield is totally ignored. Adele had at least three months to be with Jane, prior to Rochester's arrival. By that time, Jane, Adele, and Sophie were effectively mother, daughter, and aunt, respectively, with La Fairfax as dotty control-freak Grandmere. This important relationship was not well developed, as it should have shown Adele and Sophie being reluctantly won over by Super Jane. Sophie is deliberately marginalized, on purpose. The idea of Adele, discovering Antoinette, (not to mention being drugged by Mrs. Alice Fairfax) being hidden from Jane and Sophie would have lasted all of ten seconds. Detective Chief Superintendent Jane Eyre would have nailed La Fairfax and Grace Poole after the next commercial. Threaten Jane's kid, and you would rather have ten thousand Helen Mirren's on your case, backed up by every Brit Super Cop (plus Holmes, Watson, AND Poirot) ever portrayed. Lord Bond, on the direct orders of Queen Victoria, would have been dispatched to liquidate Super Villain Rochester after a chase across the Caribbean, then Europe. Pursuing ship commanded by Admiral Of The Fleet Lord Horatio Hornblower, of course. Jane then happily marries Sir Ross Poldark's grandson (a senior partner at Rothschild's), and Adele is trained as a great actress by Bella Poldark herself. That would have been more believable and fun than what Tennant wrote. Plus, more explosions... The only sequences worth anything in the last half of the book are Adele's discussions with Nadar (well portrayed throughout), Rochester admitting Jane owns his empennage, and the admittedly excellent high-wire act where Adele faces up to herself (guided and saved by Jane's voice). The rest, rebuilding Thornfield, and one of the worst villainess monologues ever, is the final impact with the ground. Even the flight recorders are destroyed on impact. BOOOOOM! No survivors. This *could* have been a great book.
