So children's non-fiction literature – including autobiography, biography, information and reference texts – is given equal status with fiction – nursery rhymes, picturebooks, novels, traditional tales, playscripts and poetry. The author addresses important issues and allows the voices of teachers, reviewers and children to be heard. The book supports teachers as they help children on their journey to becoming insightful and critical readers of non-fiction and sensitive and reflective readers of fiction. It also contains suggestions for practice which are in the spirit of the more flexible and creative approach to learning towards which primary schools are moving. It includes: help on using criteria to select quality texts of all kinds; annotated booklists for each kind of text for different age groups; suggestions for keeping a balance between print and screen-based texts; case studies showing teachers and children using texts in interesting and imaginative ways to support learning in English lessons and across the curriculum; advice on developing children's visual and multimodal literacy; guidance on using the school library and embedding study skills in children's wider purposes and learning; critiques of key theoretical perspectives and research projects. Although the main readership will be primary and student teachers, it is hoped that the book will be of interest and use to anyone concerned with the role of texts in children's learning.

REVIEW OF UFO DIARY BY SATOSHI KITAMURA

- Ms. Arnothy's story of a part of her youth during WWII is a well written account, giving the readers a first hand taste of what it was like to wait out air raids and wonder where your next meal is coming from. At the end, I wanted this book to keep going, to see how she finished out the war.

- I generally like Mark Twain's writing, and I love dogs, so I thought it would be an enjoyable book. It is not. It is a horrible, horrible book and I will have to spend many a day trying to get the words out of my head. I've almost been thinking that someone must have typed it in wrong, or something happened to the text in order for it to be considered a story in the first place. If you read it expect to be greatly saddened and horrified. Terrible.
