This volume of essays honours the life and work of Stephen A. Wild, one of Australia's leading ethnomusicologists. Born in Western Australia, Wild studied at Indiana University in the USA before returning to Australia to pursue a lifelong career with Indigenous Australian music. As researcher, teacher, and administrator, Wild's work has impacted generations of scholars around the world, leading him to be described as 'a great facilitator and a scholar who serves humanity through music' by Andrée Grau, Professor of the Anthropology of Dance at University of Roehampton, London. Focusing on the music of Aboriginal Australia and the Pacific Islands, and the concerns of archiving and academia, the essays within are authored by peers, colleagues, and former students of Wild. Most of the authors are members of the Study Group on Music and Dance of Oceania of the International Council for Traditional Music, an organisation that has also played an important role in Wild's life and development as a scholar of international standing. Ranging in scope from the musicological to the anthropological—from technical musical analyses to observations of the sociocultural context of music—these essays reflect not only on the varied and cross-disciplinary nature of Wild's work, but on the many facets of ethnomusicology today.

REVIEW OF UKE EAST SONGBOOK V1 UKULELE LESSONS

- I disagree with the poster who was giving the Cliff's CSET book such a glowing review. A CSET test taker knows a bad study guide after having taken and seen a real exam. As with the majority of the posters here, I agree that the content of the Cliff's Notes fell short of meeting the contents for subtest I, II, and III. The material presented in the Cliff's Notes, is either based on a loosely outline format, or will contain sporadic information that is basically a rehash of the contents of its previous edition (MSAT). If you really need to study for these tests, you CAN include the Cliff's Notes, but only use it as a last minute review. The sample tests in the Cliffs Notes are just exercises, and do not reflect the real CSET multiple subject test in question format or content. Hirsch's book (and yes, this is the correct spelling, not the one made by the previous poster) is a good reference, and you can find this book here on amazon. I also agree with the previous poster who said that you should save your money and not purchase the Teaching Solutions CD. All in all, just study, make flash cards, use other resources, and you should be fine.

- I just recently took the CSET and will be anxiously awaiting the results. But I can tell you first hand that this study guide alone will not prepare you for all the subtests. There is simply too much information to know. I agree with the posters here. The Cliffs guide is a rough, sketchy outline of the test. The sample tests will not be like the ones you'll see on test day. Recommended Resources:1. Official CSET website - download the practice multiple subject tests. This is a must. The outline of what is being tested should also be downloaded. It guides you as to what you need to know. It's a lot of topics, but you need to go through it and tough it out.2. Cliffs - not a bad idea to include this in your studies. The history section is decent, but unfortunately you need to supplement the rest.3. Barrons - posters say that there are errors. True, but I thought that the sample test were a little (slightly) better than the Cliffs.4. Hirsch's Series - 4th, 5th, 6th grade. I found a few questions here were actually on the test!5. Everything You Need to Know books - subjects in history, math, science, geology, etc. The colorful pictures can aid you on test day. They are great if you are a visual learner.6. Do use the internet to supplement your studies. Online searches, encyclopedias, etc. Get your hands on other study guides to supplement your studies. Cliffs is not the only one out there.7. Last resort, purchasing the recommended textbooks for each of the subtests. This is a very costly one, as the recommended texts are rather expensive. Not Recommended:1. CA Teaching Solutions - I agree with the poster here who had a negative review of this company. I made the costly mistake of purchasing their CD. Don't fall for this internet scam company as I hear they are being investigated.

2. MoMedia - another poor product. An e-book, c'mon guys. Even you can make an e-book. The math in there was not even on the CSET, and it really needed a lot of heavy editing to do. Get yourself a real book.

3. Ace the CSET - if you have extra money you want to spend, fine. But I found that it was more of an entertaining purchase, rather than a serious, academic one. The questions and quizzes were designed for kids, not students who are preparing to take the CSET. If you do not agree with the "Recommended List," fine. But please do not make the same mistakes I did with the "Not Recommended" list. You will be flushing your money down the toilet and regretting it. Don't do what I did. Purchasing Cliffs is a start, but surround yourself with other, better study guides, go through the recommended list and you should be prepared.
