REVIEW OF LABOUR RELATIONS QUESTION PAPER NOVEMBER 2013 N5

- The author's combination of horrid personal experience and "forced" inhumane behavior forma a valid hearing for his practice of helping others see themselves and all of life in a new way.
- What if, someone asks, life in of itself has no meaning? And what if there were nothing, no savior, no relief, no narcotic or dream--nothing--! to keep us from falling into life's absurdities, crazinesses, meaninglessnesses...Would it still be worth living to its fullest? Frankl says of course it is, if we could just keep our hearts hopeful. (My interpretation is, "Things'll be better, if I can make it to Thursday".) Do you see? In spite of the philosophical/scientific lingo on his chapters on logotherapy and the fact that perhaps we'll never be in such dire circumstances as he experienced at the concentration camps, Frankl is telling us, if anything, life is worth living because of all the good things and good people that are here around us and that we can find...even during genocide or war or personal trauma. The Meaning is clear when you reach to find it. But you must reach.
