REVIEW OF DICcionario CAMBRIDGE COMPACT ENGLISH SPANISH ESOABIK INGLIES

• I have now read Dune twice, and it remains, upon completing it a second time, just as good, intriguing, and thought-provoking as it was the first time around. It's one of those rare, wonderful novels after the reading of which no other books seem quite good enough to read for a while. In fact, Dune is so great that though I own the sequels, I haven't yet been able to read them for the fear that they might in some way diminish the masterpiece that is the original. When I first read this book, my schoolwork and social life suffered through the days it took to read it. I almost literally couldn't put it down. This novel is so engrossing, so enthralling, and so REAL that you wonder how you ever enjoyed the shallowness that is most sci-fi novels. In fact, Dune isn't just the best science fiction novel of all time, it's one of the best pieces of literature, period. And it is a very real world. The multilayered plots, the believable science, the shades-of-gray characters, the religions, emotions, technology...everything. Arthur C. Clarke is quoted in the book as saying that, "Unique...I know of nothing comparable to it except The Lord of the Rings." It's true. Any type of plot synopsis I try to give here would be hopelessly muddled and confusing, so I'll forgo that in this review and simply say that, to use the old saw, If you only read one book this year, read Dune.

• "Dune Messiah," the second book of the series, shows the "Messiah" (Paul) comparing himself to Hitler. Where Hitler tried killing only one religion: the Jewish religion. But Paul killed some forty religions and billions of people. This book teaches us to be careful whom we choose to be our messiah. Undoubtedly, the images left by such superb writings as that of Frank Herbert are forever chiseled in my mind. There is a conspiracy to eliminate Paul and Alia from the throne. The Space Navigator, Eric, with the Superior Mother are part of the conspiracy. The conspirators send the "face changer" to meet with an old guard who is blind. But his son, thru the tune of a flute, sends an encrypted message to the Face Changer that talks about a "loop hole" in the heli pad of the palace where Paul can be assassinated. After that, the Face Changer killed both the old guard and his son. Although everybody thinks of him as dead, Paul survives the atomic attack but becomes blind himself, and drifts into the desert sands. He returns as the "Messenger." Alia, meanwhile, gets taken over by the Baron Vladimir Harkonnen who is one of the thousand voices in her head. Palace intrigues and conspiracies are no different than the ones going on today or at the time of Julius Cessar. I tell you I love this book and the entire series. I don't seem to have enough of it.
