REVIEW OF 17 DONUTS WALL CALENDAR

- Jigs Gardner and his wife Jo Ann went off to farm and teach troubled boys in northern Vermont. Next they moved with their four small children to an abandoned farm on Cape Breton Island and lived there for thirty years. With no motor vehicle, they plowed and moved the hay wagon with draft horses. On the thin, poor soil they raised livestock for meat, they grew vegetables and herbs, and everywhere they grew flowers. Their life on Cape Breton is the thread running through this splendid book; but, subtitled, Uniting the Practical and Beautiful in an Integrated Landscape, it is mostly a thoughtful guide to productive farming while living in harmony with one's natural surroundings. Simply reading the table of contents is a treat: Part One: The Whole, Chapter One - The Farm Today, Chapter Two - The Evolving Landscape; Part Two: The Gardens; Part Three: The Integrated Landscape - Practice & Philosophy. The Gardners are intelligent, well educated, write superbly and, for thirty years supported their family with no institutions to mediate between them and the wolf at the door - remarkable bona fides. For decades they have contributed to small farming journals and literary magazines around the United States. Jo Ann began growing herbs and selling them at Nova Scotia fairs. As her expertise grew, she published Living with Herbs and other well-written and useful books still in print. And Gardens..., besides a pleasure to read, is filled with useful information for and guides about growing. The lovely illustrations by Elayne Sears are far better suited to this book than photographs would be, just as my best bird field guides use drawings, not photos.

- This book goes over all of the basic woodworking techniques. It includes all the tools and how to use them, joining techniques, finishing, planning, and the basics of furniture making. These are the best illustrations I've seen so far. There are no plans in this book though. For plans, check out Sunsets "Woodworking Projects", and Reader's Digest's "Woodworking Room by Room". I couldn't think of a better way to spend .
