"This book brings together chapters focusing on the history of psychological assessment in particular countries across regions from all the continents. Chapters are not just narrative accounts of the development of psychological assessment in a particular country or region. Authors were asked to situate the chapters somewhere between narrative and historiography. Hence the chapters assume a more critical stance in reporting the history of psychological assessment that recognises that history is never fact and always represents the subjective position of the author. Authors have drawn from existing sources and research but have simultaneously explored the social positionings of such research. REVIEW OF PSYCHOLOGY CAMBRIDGE INTERNATIONAL AS AND A LEVEL PSYCHOLOGY REVISION GUIDE

- I found this book in one of those factory second tables at the shopping centre, I thought it was a novel Roseanne had written, some cheesy romance thing but because I am such a huge fan I bought it anyway, God I loved it, So brutally honest and self examining, I loved the people she loved and hated those she hated.Great bio, the best I ever read.
- After reading all five books of the Belgariad, this particular book stood out. The culmination of the prophesy, the last great battle between Torak and Belgarion, was tension-filled and had one sitting on the edge of one's chair. Characters such as Barak, Polgara, Silk, Xenedra allowed the reader to relate to them on a one-to-one basis. You felt as if they were in the same room with you. They made the book all that more interesting to read. You cried with them and laughed with them. The author has really done a great job writing a novel in this genre.
