- Life in the Appalachian Mtns from the early 1900's is revealed through one woman's letters to various loved ones throughout her life. Ivy is a feisty, stubborn woman facing life on her own terms with no apologies. Her letters reveal her deepest thoughts as she faces love, loss and dealing with whatever life throws at her.
- Dr. Sarfati demolishes the evolutionary religious fanatics and the overblown claims they make in the recent NAS propaganda piece. A good solid response to attempts present evolutionism as credible or "scientific." They will not like this work, but neither will they be able to meaningfully challenge it. For its size it is as good as anything else out there (Creation Scientists Answer Their Critics would be a good companion work, and Faith, Reason and Earth History would be good for those who want to learn about the creation model, as opposed to debunking evolutionism or defending creation in general from caricatures and misrepresentations.)
